

ECO Class News!

What a trip! We had such a great day out in York, visiting the Jorvik Centre and DIG (and the shortest street with the longest name on the way). The ride through the Jorvik was fascinating: not only could we see how the Vikings lived, but we could even smell it! The class loved DIG where they got to literally... dig. But, what was the highlight of the day you may be wondering? Obviously, it was the giant replica human poo in the Jorvik Centre. (Suffice to say that it provided much hot discussion.) We also took part in a Viking medicines and remedies workshop where we found out how people got their various ailments treated – badly, by the sounds of it! Back at school, we have been learning about the heart and circulatory system in humans and animals. The children performed role-plays to demonstrate how the heart works, which were fun to watch! In English, they have been writing about their favourite 3 superheroes, and then designing their very own super hero characters and writing a procedural text on how to become that hero. (Haven't decided which one I am going to try first...) We have also been reading stories in our class book about all kinds of real life heroes. Whilst some members of the class have been swimming, others have been studying fine pencil sketching with Mr Pearson and then enjoying a unit of dance with Miss Fawcett. So, a busy and action-packed half term as usual – everyone is now ready for a rest and battery re-charge! Happy Valentine's Day!
